

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

Further heavy downpours will occur across parts of the north Midlands into the early hours of Sunday and increasingly across northern England until late morning. There will be some short duration torrential rainfall and although rainfall amounts will vary considerably, there is scope for 25 to 50 mm of rain to fall widely and up to 75 mm in some areas.

The Met Office have issued an Amber Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Sun, 28th Jul 2013 until 12:00 on Sun, 28th Jul 2013

Areas of heavy, thundery rain will continue to move northwards, clearing from the south during Sunday morning.

The public should be prepared for the risk of localised disruption, mainly due to surface water flooding.
